Two Italians Charged with Railroad Camp Hold-Up Fifty excited Italians who were held up and robbed in a railroad camp at Glen Rock, N. J., last November, appeared at Police Headquarters yesterday morning as complainants against Santo Gennaro, of No. 110 Chrystie street, and Cologoro Lampudesi, of No. 118 Chrystie street, who were arrested on Tuesday, charged with being implicated in the affair. The prisoners were arraigned in the Tombs court on a short affidavit charging them with being fugitives from justice from the State of New Jersey, and were held in $3,000 bail each for further examination on February 27. According to the stories told by the complainants, the prisoners are two of the four men who appeared at Glen Rock on November 1 and announced that they were detectives searching for a murderer. One by one the laborers were called from the camp, and after each had been searched and robbed he was tied to a tree with a gag in his mouth. When the laborers had been disposed of the quartet returned to the camp, drank and made merry, and then wrecked the place. Eight hours later some of the laborers succeeded in freeing themselves. One man had been tied so tightly that paralysis of the right hand set in, and another had three ribs broken. The robbers got about $1,500 in cash and jewelry valued at $600, according to the complainants
